

Biagio Naviglio - Graduated in Industrial Chemistry at the University of Naples - Federico II in 1980. Winner of two scholarships in "Chemical analysis and tanning technology" in 1981 and of the public competition for Researcher banned by the Stazione Sperimentale per l'Industria delle Pelli e delle Materie Concianti (SSIP). Head of the Turin Section of the SSIP from 1983 to 1989 and Scientific Director of the SSIP of Naples in 2006. Author of about 200 research works concerning, among others, chemistry and technology in tanning industry for the reduction of environmental impact, the characterization of chemical products and the implementation of Quality/environment (ISO 9000 and 14000) Management Systems, and of the REACH Regulation in the tanning sector. Expert for the Ministry of Economic Development in scientific research and technological innovation in the field of leather. Lecturer in "Knowledge on industrial processes – Tanning supply chain" (ay 2008/09 and 2016/17) at the University of Rome - La Sapienza for Armed Forces Officers. He is currently First Researcher and Head of the R&D Area of the SSIP.